Snow Leopards

Snow leopards have evolved to live in some of the harshest conditions on earth. Unfortunately, the numbers of snow leopards are dropping and they are endangered. Read on to learn how snow leopards live, what threats they are facing and what we can do to help.

low do snow leopards live?

now leopards are one of the world's most elusive cats. These shy, spotted creatures live across sia and roam high up in the vast Himalayan mountains. Snow leopards' thick fur is creamyellow and grey with dark spots, which helps them to camouflage. Covering their wide feet, thick fur protects snow leopards from the snow. Incredibly, these cats are tremendous jumpers which can leap as far as 50 feet. Additionally, leopards' long, strong tails help their balance and protect parts of their body from the severe mountain chill. Snow leopards are carnivores and their main prey are sheep and ibex.

What threats are snow leopards facing?

Unfortunately, these elegant cats' survival is under threat. Farmers' livestock roam in areas that snow leopards live. This causes farmers to kill the cats to prevent them from eating their animals. As well as this, snow leopards' lives are under threat from poaching because their pelts and body parts can be sold illegally. Shockingly, 20 percent of the population of snow leopards has been lost in the last 20 years.

What is being done to help snow leopards?

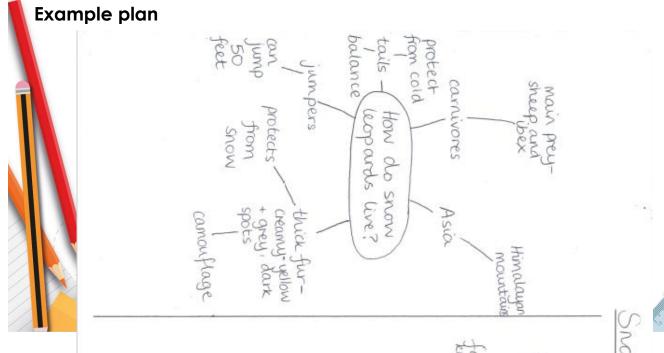

Over the past few years, a greater effort has been made to save snow leopards. Some areas have been protected and sanctuaries have been created as safe areas for them to live. There has also been stronger enforcement against poaching and things done to keep leopards away from farmers' livestock.
